

E S

.....

..... 21

ENVS-1023. Introduction to Environmental Praxis: Thinking Globally, Acting Locally

ENVS-1023. Introduction to Environmental Praxis: Thinking Globally, Acting Locally

ENVS-1023 is a course that explores the relationship between environmental science and social justice. It focuses on the impact of environmental degradation on marginalized communities and the role of environmental praxis in addressing these issues. The course covers topics such as environmental justice, climate change, and the role of community organizations in environmental activism. The course is designed to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of environmental praxis and its role in addressing environmental justice issues. The course is a required course for students pursuing a degree in Environmental Studies. The course is taught by Professor [Name]. The course is offered in the fall semester. The course is a 3-credit course. The course is a required course for students pursuing a degree in Environmental Studies. The course is taught by Professor [Name]. The course is offered in the fall semester. The course is a 3-credit course.

ENVS-2023. Environment and Society II: Perspectives on Human-Nature Relations (HMRT 2243)

ENVS-2023 is a course that explores the relationship between human and nature. It focuses on the impact of human activities on the environment and the role of environmental science in addressing these issues. The course covers topics such as environmental science, environmental policy, and the role of environmental science in addressing environmental issues. The course is designed to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of environmental science and its role in addressing environmental issues. The course is a required course for students pursuing a degree in Environmental Studies. The course is taught by Professor [Name]. The course is offered in the fall semester. The course is a 3-credit course.

ENVS-2113. Ecological Literacy

ENVS-2113 is a course that explores the relationship between human and nature. It focuses on the impact of human activities on the environment and the role of environmental science in addressing these issues. The course covers topics such as environmental science, environmental policy, and the role of environmental science in addressing environmental issues. The course is designed to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of environmental science and its role in addressing environmental issues. The course is a required course for students pursuing a degree in Environmental Studies. The course is taught by Professor [Name]. The course is offered in the fall semester. The course is a 3-credit course.

ENVS-3023. Environmental Praxis (HMRT 3223)

This course is designed to provide students with a hands-on experience in environmental management. Students will be required to complete a series of projects and assignments that focus on the practical application of environmental science and management principles. The course is designed to be completed over a period of 1013 hours, with a final assessment in 2023.

ENVS-3033. Nonprofit Management (BUSI 3023)

This course is designed to provide students with a hands-on experience in nonprofit management. Students will be required to complete a series of projects and assignments that focus on the practical application of nonprofit management principles. The course is designed to be completed over a period of 1013 hours, with a final assessment in 2023.

ENVS-3053. Campus Sustainability

This course is designed to provide students with a hands-on experience in campus sustainability. Students will be required to complete a series of projects and assignments that focus on the practical application of campus sustainability principles. The course is designed to be completed over a period of 1013 hours, with a final assessment in 2023.

ENVS-3333. Environmental Economics (ECON 3323)

This course examines the economic impact of environmental quality and the environmental consequences of economic activity. Topics include: environmental quality indicators, environmental quality and economic growth, environmental quality and income distribution, environmental quality and public policy, environmental quality and international trade, environmental quality and international migration, environmental quality and international investment, environmental quality and international development.

ENVS-3413. The Political Economy of Climate Change (ECON)

This course examines the political economy of climate change. Topics include: the political economy of climate change, the political economy of climate change and international trade, the political economy of climate change and international migration, the political economy of climate change and international investment, the political economy of climate change and international development.

ENVS-3723. Human Ecology (ANTH)

This course examines the relationship between humans and their environment. Topics include: human ecology, human ecology and international trade, human ecology and international migration, human ecology and international investment, human ecology and international development.

ENVS-4003. Capstone Seminar

This course is a capstone seminar for students in the Environmental Studies program. Topics include: environmental quality, environmental quality and economic growth, environmental quality and income distribution, environmental quality and public policy, environmental quality and international trade, environmental quality and international migration, environmental quality and international investment, environmental quality and international development.

ENVS-4006. Work-Study Project

This course is a work-study project for students in the Environmental Studies program. Topics include: environmental quality, environmental quality and economic growth, environmental quality and income distribution, environmental quality and public policy, environmental quality and international trade, environmental quality and international migration, environmental quality and international investment, environmental quality and international development.

NOTE: Not all courses listed are offered each year. Please consult with the Department Chair for more information about current and planned course offerings.